

SYNOPSIS

SEBASTIANA

Tiana is a seller of sweet corn cakes in a small town in the country of Brazilian northeastern backwoods. She narrates her life story from the visit of an old acquaintance, Madame Cotinha, who brings her the news of her mother's illness, which Tiana has not seen for more than forty years. Along with the news of the disease, Tiana knows about the success destiny of her brothers, all now living in Brasília. More than bringing news of her family, the visit of Madame Cotinha reopens in Tiana old wounds that she thought were healed.
